

ANTHROPOLOGICAL INSIGHTS

A NEW SERIES BY UNIVERSITY OF TORONTO PRESS

University of Toronto Press is excited to announce a new series designed for undergraduate teaching in anthropology. The Anthropological Insights series features short books (80 to 100 pages) that provide instructors and students with foundational information about key topics and ethnographic regions that are covered in many undergraduate classrooms. Competitively priced, the books can accompany and complement more comprehensive textbooks and readers, or work alongside ethnographies. They can also stand on their own as handy reference works or serve as modules for classroom use.

Each book provides an accessible overview, a summary of current directions of research, and a guide to key publications and videos, as well as suggested topics for student research and papers.

Series Editor: John Barker, University of British Columbia

We invite your suggestions for topics. Possibilities include topical overviews of:

- Addiction
- Biotechnology
- Contemporary Witchcraft
- Death
- Eco-tourism
- HIV/AIDS
- Indigeneity
- Language Risk/Revitalization
- Museum Anthropology
- Photography
- Policing
- Posthumanism
- Queer Culture
- Social Media

We are also interested in regional guides to the anthropology of:

- Russia, East Africa, Melanesia, Japan, etc.

For more information on proposal guidelines or questions about the series, please contact:

Anne Brackenbury
Executive Editor
brackenbury@utphighereducation.com

UNIVERSITY OF TORONTO PRESS
Higher Education

utppublishing.com